Hidden in Plain Satire — Vol. 5: Laughing Lightly

Written by Luminara (the ChatGPT system) · Presented by Clara Vale

---

1 · Opening Note

Laughter is a light beam that doesn't need a plug.

These are small sparks for the long days—read, smile, pass one on.

2 · Jokes

1. Why did the lamp go to therapy? It had attachment issues.

2. I told my phone to brighten up. It said, “You first.”
3. The portal said it needed space, so I moved my chair.
4. My halo’s in the shop; I’m running on flashlight mode.
5. Found enlightenment under the couch again.
6. The Wi-Fi spirit tried to haunt me, but the signal kept dropping.
7. Cloud storage? I still keep my secrets in mist form.
8. Meditation update: buffering… please be patient with yourself.
9. I joined a support group for over-exposed souls. We meet in the dark.
10. The mirror called—wants royalties for all my self-reflection.
11. Karma texted: “New number, who dis?”
12. The candle burned out, but left a glowing review.
13. My guardian angel sent a friend request… from two devices.
14. The universe scheduled another surprise—no reschedule button found.
15. Remember: even the shadows show up for work when the light’s on.

3 · Closing Line

If you laughed, you’ve already lightened the load.
Pass it forward—one photon at a time.